

WHERE NEUROSCIENCE MEETS FUNCTIONAL OUTCOMES

To Whom It May Concern,

I do not normally disclose personal information such as this; however, it has become necessary for me share it so that I can be productive and efficient in all that I do. I have a brain injury, and some of the deficits I might experience include:

- Headaches
- Nausea
- Balance Problems
- Visual Issues
- Dizziness
- Sensitivity to Lights
- Sensitivity to Sound
- Mentally Foggy
- Difficulty Concentrating
- Difficulty Remembering
- Difficulty Multitasking
- Difficulty Making Decisions
- Difficulty Following Directions
- Difficulty Prioritizing
- Difficulty Word Finding
- Irritability
- Sadness
- Anxiety
- Drowsiness

In order to be successful, I may need to be able to do the following:

- Dim the lights
- Decrease noise in the room
- Make lists/have written information
- Take frequent breaks
- Provide me with one task at a time
- Reduce distractions in the environment
- Have spoken information presented slowly and with pauses
- Wear a hat
- Take a walk
- Be seated on the outer edge
- Use a hand fan
- Limit environmental scents
- Provide increased time to process information
- Provide me with limited choices to help with decisions
- Provide large print
